TRIP PROFILE

On the banks of the scenic Ping River, just five kilometres downstream of modern-day Chiang Mai, are the historic ruins of Wiang Khum Kham, the first Mon settlement dating back to the 11th century. Constructed as part of the Haripunchai kingdom this satellite town was ruined by floods and abandoned, but the ruins have recently been excavated and this historical marker is the perfect place for the start of our ride through the Lanna countryside.

On route to our destination of Lamphun, or Haripunchai as it once was called, we ride through quiet country roads and farmland and experience the Lanna way of life. Our ride takes us further into abundant orchards with a plethora of seasonal fruit including longans, lychee, mangos, bananas, guavas, coconuts, jackfruit, durian, and dragon fruit, among many others. As we pass through small rural villages and crisscross the tranquil Ping River we encounter smiling faces and a friendly, relaxed atmosphere. We'll take the time to stop often to sample the local delights on offer at road-side stalls and markets.

Once we reach historical Lamphun, we'll cycle around the ancient city walls and stop to see the oldest and holiest stupa in Thailand built in 1044, Wat Phra That Haripunchai. This region was originally ruled by legendary Mon Queen Chama Thewi and precedes Chiang Mai by 700 years. For lunch we'll stop at a riverside restaurant and enjoy local Lanna cuisine. We'll also take time out to explore Lamphun's lively markets where the fresh fruit from the orchards we rode through will be on offer. This idyllic town is the origin of the kingdom of a million rice fields and of great heritage significance!
